1. Pionersk harbor is used principally as a base for 30-odd trawlers. These ships use a newly built quay in the western part of the harbor as a mooring place. This quay is built of wood on piles, and within the quay there is a leveled off-shore area. On this is a canning factory and a refrigeration building, to which the trawlers discharge their catch. A new factory building is being constructed of brick south of the canning factory. There are oil and water pipes on the south part of the quay where the trawlers replenish their supplies. The depth of the water off this quay was measured at about 10 meters.
2. The middle pier in the harbor, which lies on a north-south line, is used as a mooring place for minesweepers and other small naval ships. Three watch-towers, spaced at intervals of several hundred meters, are located on the beach east of the harbor, and on a height southwest of the harbor is a battery.
